COMSYS supplies technical consultants to clients who build strategic systems. COMSYS staff members have built engineering systems, provided system testing, assisted with network operations and developed business management functions.

COMSYS offers three staffing alternatives to meet personnel requirements for specific projects. Technical teams consist of personnel who work on client projects where team coordination is required. Individual contributors provide specific consulting support for needed skill areas. Managed teams contain both technical and project management resources.

– New system design and integration
– Communications systems
– Device drivers
– Communications protocol support
– Component and system testing
– System integration

COMSYS is the premier national supplier of skilled computer professionals. We offer a wide range of technical staffing services, from hard-to-find temporary skills to full project staffing, to work on your strategic projects.
